

Custodial Operations Policy and Procedures

12.1 Custodial referrals for inmate psychology, services and programs

Policy summary

Psychology, services and programs assist in the safe and effective management of inmates, enable inmates to remain engaged with their family and community, provide the foundation for inmate reintegration and assists in the reduction of re-offending.

Any custodial staff may refer an inmate for services and/or psychology, at any stage during an inmate's period of custody. For programs, custodial staff may advise an inmate to speak with their Case Management Officer.

This policy and procedure sets out the process for these referrals.

1 Custodial referrals for inmate psychology, services and programs

1.1 Policy

Psychology, services and programs assist in the safe and effective management of inmates, enable inmates to remain engaged with their family and community, provides the foundation for inmate reintegration and assists in the reduction of re-offending.

Offender Services and Programs (OS&P) staff consist of Service and Programs Officers (SAPOs) and Psychologists.

Any custodial staff may refer inmates for services and/or psychology. A referral can be generated for an inmate at any stage during their period of custody. For programs, custodial staff may advise an inmate to speak to their Case Management Officer (CMO) at their next Case Management meeting, or custodial staff can email the Case Management Unit (CMU) mailbox to advise that the inmate wishes to see their Case Management Officer.

All referrals must be made in line with the criteria set out in the Service and programs eligibility referral table. The referral must be entered electronically via the Offender Integrated Management System (OIMS).

For enquiries about services not included in the eligibility referral table, or for further information regarding the functions of OS&P, please contact OS&P via Offender Management and Programs.

1.2 Crisis or emergency

There is a duty of care in crisis or emergency situations such as:

- a death in the family
- a child at risk in the community
- a family crisis
- unattended animals.

In these circumstances, staff must generate a crisis intervention referral on OIMS as indicated in the Service and programs eligibility referral table for the OIMS referral process.

If the inmate may be at risk of suicide/self-harm behaviour or harm to others, immediate action must be taken to manage the needs of the inmate prior to a referral being made to psychology (refer to COPP section 3.7 Management of inmates at risk of self-harm or suicide).

1.3 Procedures

An entry into the Offender Programs and Evaluation Measures screen of the OIMS Programs and Services module will generate a service and/or psychology referral.

All referrals must include a comment which identifies the specific reason for the referral. The Service and programs eligibility referral table outlines what comments should be included for each referral type.
